TIR GOFAL FARM VISIT REPORT

This report is intended to provide a statement on the condition and recommended management of all known archaeological and historical sites and features on this farm at the time it was visited by Cambria Archaeology. This information will be used to inform the Tir Gofal Management Agreement for the farm.

The report structure is as follows:

- explanation of archaeological site status and management categories used in the gazetteer.
- a brief statement on the historical background to the farm which enables the reader to put the specific sites into context.
- the main body of the report is a gazetteer of sites previously known or identified during the visit. The gazetteer identifies sites by their Primary Record Number (PRN) which is the reference number used in the Sites and Monuments Record (SMR). It also locates them by National Grid Reference (NGR).
- list of sources consulted during the research for this project.
- explanation of colour coding used on the map.
- site location maps identifying by PRN the location of each site in the gazetteer.
- photographs of specific sites are included where the author considers it useful in order to identify a site or stress a particular management issue.

Description of Llwynywormwood Farm, Myddfai, PRN 7494

Llwynywormwood Farm was built as the home farm of the Llwynywormwood Estate. The current holding covers about 78.3ha of rolling land, just to the north of Myddfai village. In the mid-nineteenth century the estate extended over 3627 acres. Most of this area surrounds the ruin of the mansion house. A further piece of land lies to the north west of the park beyond the Afon Ydw. The status of the farm as part of a parkland landscape with the house at its centre, has influenced the layout of the buildings and the land around them.

The history of the park is somewhat unclear and few documents survive to account for it. The earliest record of both the farm buildings and the main mansion is on a tithe survey of 1845. However, evidence provided by the few documents that do survive and the buildings and earthworks within the park shows that the estate clearly predates the tithe survey.

It is first mentioned in documents from the mid-eighteenth century when it was occupied by the family and descendants of Daniel Williams. When he died in 1785, it was inherited by his nephew John Griffies who built the late eighteenth/early nineteenth century mansion and probably created the park, lodges and home farm within it. His son, the Revd. Henry Griffies-Williams had two daughters who co-inherited the estate upon his death in 1871. When the sisters died, the estate was finally put up for sale in 1909. At this time it was described as having been "for several years unoccupied except by a caretaker" (Francis Jones, 1987). It then consisted of a Mansion House, outer kitchen, stables, saddle and harness room, coach-house with men's room over, gardens, home farm and three lodges. Much of the former parkland and the lodges have since been sold.

Whilst the mansion house is now in a ruinous state, the farm buildings are still in use. The earliest farm buildings include an impressive barn, animal houses and carriage houses which are arranged on three sides of a cobbled courtyard. The barn which forms the southern range of these, is now a Listed Building Grade II. An additional range was built on the western side of the courtyard by the time of the 1st edition OS maps in 1905, entirely enclosing the farmyard.

There is no evidence that the park was formally bounded, although a substantial earthen bank has been observed in places along its eastern edge. The boundaries within and around the current holding are generally defined by substantial hedges, most of which were laid out when the park was created in the late eighteenth or early nineteenth century. The remains of former trackways and paths running around the park are still visible as earthworks.

The farm is distinguished by its fine range of buildings and the many remnants of the picturesque park that lie around the grounds. This farm visit and other recent investigations have identified it as a landscape of considerable archaeological interest which deserves further investigation.

Management Recommendations

The farm is maintained in a way which is sensitive to both the archaeological and architectural features within it. The field boundaries and buildings should be maintained in their current condition. Archaeological advice should be sought prior to the reinstatement of parkland features or alterations to the buildings.

Includes a barn (PRN 41384), farmhouse (PRN 41385), and two further farm buildings (PRN 41386 and 41387) which are arranged in a quadrangle and surround a rectangular cobbled farmyard. Site type MANSION	Period Post Med	Site Status

Description

Llwynywormwood mansion house is essentially a ruin (plates 1 and 2). It sits on a levelled platform that is cut into a north-facing slope and has extensive views across the park. The building clearly has a complex history of construction which could be clarified by further survey work. It appears to have originated as a 3-storey random rubble construction that was later extended to the north. A single-storey structure to the rear of the main house provided a detached kitchen. The range from this survives in-situ (plate 3).

Description

Small irregularly shaped pond c.30m x 20m in a small wooded glade to the west of Llwynywormwood Farm. The pond is fed by a natural spring which has been dammed with a large c.2m wide earth and stone bank. This bank is breached on its northern side. The breach is surrounded by stone rubble and broken black and red tiles which may have formed part of the original structure. The pond itself is overgrown and has been silted up for several years.

Narrow pathway c.3m wide leading through woodland from the back of the mansion house (PRN 19391) towards the walled garden (PRN 41378). It is defined by low earthen banks c.0.5m high on either side and planted in places with ornamental shrubs. It is less distinct to the south where it skirts a small rock outcrop.

Site type GARDEN HOUSE	Period Post Med	Site Status

Description

The site of a former garden building c.3m x 3m is marked by a low platform against the western wall of the walled garden and a pile of stone rubble in its south western corner. Slots for roof timbers and a small high window mark its original position in the garden wall. The purpose of the building is unclear although the owner suggests that the high window may have provided a 'lookout point' onto the orchard to the south.

Site type WALLED GARDEN	Period Post Med	Site Status

Description

Fine, rectangular walled garden with an east-facing prospect and high (c.2m) rubble walls (plate 4). The garden would have been entered via an arched opening in the northwestern corner from the pathway (PRN 41376) that leads from the mansion. The entranceway is headed with stone voussoirs and gives extensive views across to the Black Mountain. An additional opening in the southern wall has been modified and enlarged but would originally have led through to an orchard that is recorded on the 1st edition OS map (1891). The walls appear to have been edged with a scalloped design and have bevelled corners. A raised platform runs along the length of the western wall upon which a garden house (PRN 41377) formerly stood in the southwestern corner. The area within the walls has been cleared for a vegetable garden and the erection of a glasshouse.

Description

Stone and earth-built ha-ha consisting of a c.1m drop from the natural slope and a c.2m terrace. The ha-ha skirts the hillside below the mansion house and partially encloses the area around it. There is no evidence that the ha-ha was faced with stones but a small stone lined drain is built into from it on its north western side.

Site type BANK (EARTHWORK) AND BRIDGE	Period Post Med	Site Status

Description

Substantial, raised bank leading downslope from Llwynywormwood mansion towards a former bridge across the Afon Ydw (plate 6). It continues beyond the bridge up the opposite hillside towards the main driveway (PRN 41383). The bank stands at a maximum of c.1.8m high and 3m wide in the valley bottom. Little evidence remains of the bridge other than its crumbling stone footings. The route is marked on 1st and 2nd edition OS maps (1891 and 1906) as a tree lined pathway. On recent maps it is shown as a more substantial trackway and may have been used as an alternative route to the entrance to the park avoiding the circuitous earlier drive (PRN 41383). The original form of the bridge is difficult to determine but was probably of wooden construction and ornamental in style.

Description

Small single-span arched bridge over the Afon Ydw where it was crossed by the main driveway (PRN 41383) to Llwynwormwood mansion house. Rubble construction with parapets to either side. The parapets are overgrown with ivy and their original form is hard to determine. However, the eastern parapet appears to have been cut away at the centre to provide a lookout point to the stream beneath.

Terraced carriage drive leading southwards from the road towards Llwynwormwood mansion house. It enters the park from its northwestern corner and winds from west to east alongside the river, before crossing a small bridge (PRN 41382) and turning back westwards towards the mansion house. It was probably designed to provide visitors to the mansion with extensive views across the park before their arrival at the house. The roughly gravelled surface survives in places.

Site type BARN	Period Post Med	Site Status LB2

Description

Long, single range rubble barn with a hipped slate roof, forming the southern range of the quadrangle of farm buildings at Llwynwormwood Home Farm. Traces of former whitewash survive on the exterior. Accessed via two large, timber lintelled entrances in the northern and southern walls with boarded double doors. Ventilated by three vent loops on the end walls and six on the front and rear walls (two in the centre and two on the far side of the doors). Fine undivided interior with triple purlin roof and ten pegged roof-trusses. A large area of original cobbling skirts the barn on its northern side. This was slightly damaged by the addition of later, post-built extension which has since been demolished. Its construction has been dated to the late eighteenth or early nineteenth century.

Description

Two storey domestic conversion of the original coach house and stables forming the eastern range of the quadrangle of farm buildings at Llwynwormwood Home Farm. Rubble construction with brick-built extensions to the rear and a gabled slate roof. Further survey work would clarify its history of construction. The stone voussoired arches from the original coach house have been retained in the west-facing wall. The base of a further arch which would have extended across the entrance to the farmyard in its southeastern corner also survives in this wall.

Single storey rubble farm building forming the western side of the farmyard at Llwynwormwood Home Farm. It represents a later nineteenth century extension to the original u-shaped arrangement of farm buildings and was first recorded on the 1st Edition OS map (1891). The original building has largely been demolished and its original purpose is difficult to determine. The western wall survives to roof height. The remaining walls have been replaced with breeze blocks.

Description

Large, double-pile farm building forming the northern range of the original late eighteenth century/early nineteenth century u-shaped arrangement of farm buildings at Llwynwormwood home farm. The entire building is of random rubble construction with a gabled slate roof and a whitewashed exterior. The existing structure has been built in three distinct phases - an original two-storey, single-range building built into the hillside which was later extended on two separate occasions at first floor level to the south. The roof of the original building was raised and replaced to accommodate the initial extension at the western end. The building includes a carriage house (PRN 42295), stables (PRN 42296), dairy? (PRN 42298), and pigsties and a smithy/brewhouse in the later extensions (PRN 42300). See individual descriptions for more details.

Small, irregularly shaped lake at the western end of the Afon Ydw valley just to the north of the mansion house in Llwynwormwood Park. Fed by two 'horned' inlets from the Afon Ydw and a minor tributary at its western end. The water supply was controlled by a substantial earth and stone dam c. 1.5m high by 2m across at its western end. The lake is silted up and overgrown with small trees and undergrowth. The inlet channels are marked by breaches in the dam and surrounded by stone and mortar debris. This debris probably represents the remains of bridges that allowed the inlets to be crossed and provided a walkway across the western end of the lake.

Formerly separated by a thin wooden partition from the remainder of the building to the west and open to roof height. Accessed by a large c.2m high double door, now headed with brick voussoirs. The eastern gable wall holds a decorative, triangular arrangement of nesting boxes and a small arched window (formerly glazed). A small brick-built flue in the south eastern corner is also probably original. This room is documented to have held the 'blue and silver' carriage.

Both of the extensions have undergone considerable modification and their original purpose is hard to determine. The earliest phase at the western end probably provided small animal houses (pigsties?), a smithy or brewhouse occupied the western end of the more recent extension (the chimney for which survives) and other rooms of unknown purpose occupied the eastern end of this later extension. The walls have been rebuilt in places with breeze block and most of the original openings have been replaced. The interior was not examined.
