

COMMENT	AUTHORITY
"The trident incised on the undressed fragment of local stone is an interesting symbol. The technique - the design is pecked with a pointed implement, not cut with a chisel - suggests a pre-Norman date, but I am not able to point to a parallel, or to explain the symbol."
Exhibited by Mr. S.M. Powell at the Memorial Hall, Tregaron. Found at Cae'r Fynwent, Godregarth.
A footnote draws attention to a second example built into the churchyard wall at Llanddeini Brefi	S.M. Powell, Arch. Camb 1931 vol. 86, p. 386
Stone with incised trident from Cae'r Fynwent, Godregarth.
Couldn't this be a mason's mark?	OT 245-85
