

COMMENT

AUTHORITY

The exact generic type of this feature is unclear. It consists of a semi-circular platform of material being demarcated by a curving lynchet approx. 0.4 - 0.5m in height. It appears to be connected to an old field boundary, formed by a stone and earth bank. To the east lies a second curving lynchet facing the first, effectively creating a shallow ditch, on the eastern side. This is possibly the denuded remains of a heath referred to in 557.

H.R. Genard. 1987.
25/2/87