New Moat

Roman Camp

1320

The traces of a camp here are very indistinct, and there does not seem to be any sufficient reason for its name.

New Moat

Tumulus

1320

The tumulus is 36 feet high and about 240 feet in diameter. The trench is 14 feet deep; on the south-east it was banked up; on the other sides it was cut in the soil. The old sluice can be seen. This seems not unlikely to be the MOTTE from which the place takes its name.
