

7. Blaen-Glasfwrdd 3 (fig. 6: surveyed 1979) SN 76 SE

7714 631b

Lying on the slope of a spur on the side of the Glasfwrdd valley at 410 m OD, within a cairn cemetery. The cairn has been severely robbed and now measures 7.5 m (E-W) × 6 m with a height of only a few centimetres above the turf. A number of barely visible leaning earthfast slabs are spaced around the perimeter of the cairn. At the centre lies an open cist, the capstone displaced to the S. The denudation of this site and its neighbour (No. 8, below) is probably related to the presence of numerous ruined rectangular buildings in the vicinity.
