

COMMENT

AUTHORITY

An upright rubbing stone of red & grey rock stands in the pasture field overlooking Gwarmacwydd. The stone has presumably been moved to its present site for use as a rubbing stone, a hole through the stone suggests that it was formerly used as a gatepost.

There is some animal erosion around the base of the stone but this is not yet affecting its stability. Some lichen growth.

See GP → NW

L. Weeks DAT
18th June 1985