Two Cromlechs

2847-8

The capstone of one of these cromlechs is remarkable for its thickness, the measurements being 10ft x 10ft by 10ft thick. It lies on 4 legs which have fallen under the great weight. The capstone of the adjacent cromlech measures 15ft x 10ft by 5ft thick and partly rests on underlying stones. Upon a cursory glance these cromlechs would appear to be a collection of boulders, but upon examination it will be found that the capstones are not of the character of the rock found in situ, and their angularity prove them to be other than erratic boulders.
