

A circular enclosure within a mound composed of earth, and once encircled by large stones, most of which have been taken away for fences. It is on the slope of the hill, its smallest diameter being about 170' and within the area on the south side is a spring of water.

Sir I. G. Wilkinson,
1871 Coll. Arch. Vol. 2
p. 227.