All that remains is the south-west tower in good repair; 15 feet square and 30 feet high, and two sides of a deep sunk fence. stone faced. The pigeon-house stands just outside. Fenton, 401. Arch. Camb. II, iii, 139.

Old Rectory

At Angle, the sandstone tower known as the Old Rectory (1) stands at the side of a small creek, just north of the village. It is a pure fortified tower house, akin to the pele towers of the Scottish border, and Irish towers such as Rockfleet (Co. Mayo), but unlike anything else in Wales. This unexpected building is well worth a visit.
