Camp

Circular camp close to homestead, where are remains of old buildings, approached by deep sunken and narrow lanes; entrance on north where ground slopes towards the stream. There is another small stream on the east and north-east sides; a garden hedge has been built across the camp. The measurements are: 37 yards from east to west, and 25 yards from north to the hedge, and for about 10 yards beyond the hedge, where the bank has been removed, except a part on the south-east corner. There was a good natural defence on the south. The bank, where left, is 13 feet high inside and about 20 ft outside, but overgrown with fern.
